

BE NO SLACKER; BE A BACKER

(By John W. Kelly)

Upon a time there was a farmer whose sheep were threatened by coyotes, so he decided to protect them at night with a high, tight fence. All day he labored and when evening approached it was almost, but not quite, completed.

The farmer was fagged, twilight was approaching and instead of nailing up the remaining boards he drove in the sheep and decided to take a chance. In the morning he discovered the ravages caused in the flock by the enemy marauders; the fence he had built for protection was no protection, because when twilight came he failed to finish it.

Don't permit your patriotism to succumb to the twilight zone!

In the twilight there is a slacking of industry, a tendency to take things indifferently—to loaf.

Having performed a good day's work, twilight finds a man tired of the heat and the burdens, ready to rest and congratulate himself on his accomplishments.

The Third Liberty Loan is in the twilight zone of war financing.

Twice have the people of Oregon labored indefatigably and accomplished a great work in over-subscribing the state's allotment.

Now comes the real test—now is to disclose whether they still have the vigor and patriotic strength heretofore displayed.

It remains to be seen whether they will consider their duty performed and are content to slacken, to take things indifferently, to loaf on the job of patriotism.

After a day in the fields it requires spunk and pluck to tackle additional work in the twilight. The man who determines to press the labor a little further—to make a real finish to the day's stunt, is doing something for himself. And so is it with those who have helped in the previous bond flotations. There is a bit more to do before turning in; a little more exertion and patience and drain on the resources.

But if patriotism is not lulled into indifference of the twilight, the fence of protection will be completed.

Take no chances. Every bond is a board in the fence to keep out the Hun coyotes.

Report, but don't repeat.
Help in Germany's defeat.

right kind, men and women who are going out to help me win that nomination.

"My reception everywhere at the hands of the whole-hearted people of this part of Oregon has been a decided pleasure. At the start of the tour we did not make much headway, or at least I thought so. Now I am receiving letters at every postoffice from people at The Dalles and other places assuring me that after further consideration after my departure, they have decided to merge their support with that of the hundreds of Eastern Oregon.

"I shall continue this same sort of personal campaign to the last minute. I find that people are still open to conviction on the matter of the state's needs and that it is a very easy matter to make friends where the things that I stand for are brought home.

"In every community I make it a point not to leave, regardless of my schedule, until I have spoken personally and individually to at least ten per cent of the voting strength. I shall cover other portions of Oregon just as thoroughly as I have covered this part. Such a campaign must win."

"REX" LIME-SULPHUR SOLUTION IS THE "OLD AND TRIED" MATERIAL FOR USE, AS A DORMANT SPRAY, IN THE CONTROL OF SAN HORN SCALE, TWIG BORER AND FOR GENERAL CLEAN-UP PURPOSES IN YOUR ORCHARDS

Do not be misled by the manufacturer or dealer who has something "just as good," although he may have a product which is called a lime-sulphur in some other form.

One manufacturer has advertised that 80 pounds of their "dry" lime-sulphur will accomplish the same result as one barrel of the liquid form. This statement, as well as other statements in their advertising has been made to mislead the growers, as 80 pounds of their material will make, when used as directed, only 400 gallons of dilute spray, while one 50-gallon barrel of "REX" Lime-Sulphur Solution, when used as directed (1 gallon to 8 gallons of water), will make not less than 450 gallons of dilute spray, and when used at 1 to 9, as most growers use it, will make 500 gallons.

EFFICIENCY and COST are the only standards by which spray materials can be compared.

80 pounds of the "dry" represents the total combined sulphur and lime in this product, of which not to exceed 55 pounds can be sulphur. One 50-gallon barrel of "REX" LIME SULPHUR SOLUTION contains not less than 134 pounds of SULPHUR, or a total of 194 to 198 pounds of combined sulphur and lime, 96 per cent of the sulphur being in a sulphide or efficient form, and the total of 194 to 198 pounds being soluble or in solution.

As SULPHUR is the EFFICIENT content it is hard to believe, and still harder to figure, that 80 pounds of any product can or will do the work of 194 pounds of the same material when used for the same purpose.

If you would use 194 pounds of their "dry," and if the total 194 pounds would go into solution, then, it is our opinion, the

194 pounds would equal one 50-gallon barrel of "REX." However, as it DOES NOT all go into solution it is necessary that an excess of 194 pounds be used to equal in EFFICIENCY one 50-gallon barrel of "REX."

After well considering the COMPARATIVE EFFICIENCY let us figure the COMPARATIVE COST.

"DRY" costs, f. o. b. Payette, 11c per pound. When used as recommended 100 pounds will make 500 gallons of dilute spray at a cost of $11.00, or $0.022 per gallon.

"REX" costs, f. o. b. Payette, 20c per gallon. When used as recommended 50 gallons will make 500 gallons of dilute spray at a cost of $10.00, or $0.02 per gallon.

If the "dry" were to be used at EFFICIENCY STRENGTH EQUAL TO "REX" it would require not less than 194 pounds, at 11c per pound, making a total cost of $21.34 for 500 gallons, or $0.04268 per gallon of dilute spray.

It is true a dealer can make a greater profit selling the "dry" than he can by selling the liquid; in fact, he can make more than 100 per cent greater profit, but can you, a grower, afford to risk your season's work and your entire crop to enable him to do so?

Use "REX" Lime-Sulphur Solution, and "REX" Arsenate of Lead, paste or powdered, the materials which the National Insecticide Board, Washington, D. C. HAVE NEVER GIVEN AN ADVERSE DECISION, and you will receive the greatest efficiency in your spraying operations, and will be pleased.

"REX" COMPANIES guarantee every article of merchandise which they sell.
